March 20, 2008: We would like to welcome our newest member of the localLINUX family, Mr. Kent Sparkman. Kent is a Slaton, Texas native, and a former member of the US Army. He has a history of project management, leadership, and over ten years experience in various positions in the world of information technology. His major strengths are cabling design and implementation, as well as wireless connectivity solutions.

Starting back in the army as a personnel database administration specialist, he transitioned from there to the civilian world, working in the emergency services industry, installing and servicing emergency call dispatch centers in everything from workstation rollouts to back room telephone switching operations. His next job came with an internet service provider, as the lead technician on a large scale terrestrial based wireless network, utilizing a wide range of off the shelf solutions to best offer coverage and performance. Next he joined the IT support team of a local financial institution. Recognizing the importance of data security and reliability, while on staff, external auditors consistently noted the efficiency and high level of skill that all information assets were attended to. Even with a fifty percent reduction of IT support, all systems stayed operational and maintained "5-9's" availability.

During his spare time, Kent Sparkman has developed a love for photography. His primary interest is shooting sports and wildlife, but has a wide variety of experience with all subjects, and has become quite accomplished with studio and specialty product shooting.

"Kent brings an amazing set of skills to localLINUX that our customers will benefit from.", said Michael Strong, COO. "With a background in wireless, networking, and security, Kent will make an immediate impact at localLINUX. Our service and customer support is stronger than ever, and Kent's role as the Service & Support Manager will serve to strengthen this commitment to our customers."
